

Hiring: Junior Graphic Designer

Required full-time weekdays in a small agency to cover a maternity leave.

Brief company description

Town Hall Brands works with clients in the wine industry and other sectors to help with their marketing strategy, logo and graphic design, packaging, advertising campaigns, public relations/social media outreach, and media relations to get the word out. This team has the industry-leading experience for more than 18 years. Our workplace is casual but our work is professional. And allergy alert: there is a dog in the office. If you want to work in an open concept office in the brewery district with a small team of professionals, send us your resume. More information can be found at: www.townhallbrands.com.

Time period

Temporary, full-time (maternity leave) graphic design position at a boutique communications and branding agency starting May 1st, 2016. This position is for 1 year, but has the potential to lead to permanent full-time work.

Duties/responsibilities

An entry level position, the graphic designer can expect to work mostly on production jobs including sell sheets, wine labels, neck tags, advertisements, mockups, brochures and more. Projects will be completed working closely with the client. Time management skills are key to meet deadlines and balancing jobs with quick turnaround. While many projects require the use of pre-existing brand guidelines, some opportunities have more creative freedom.

Qualifications

Recent graduate from a recognized graphic design school - Proficient in Adobe CC, including InDesign, Illustrator and Photoshop - Comfortable with Microsoft Office, including Word, Powerpoint and Excel

Salary/Compensation

The situation is contractual, with a negotiable hourly rate based on experience, with a rate review and an available benefit package after six months.

You invoice as a self employed subcontractor. The work is dynamic; working with clients to do full on marketing, packaging, branding and production. There is room to grow, but it would be earned.
